

CASE REPORT

African honey used on a nonhealing scalp wound.

Anna Kristina Grøndahl^{1,2,3}, Mathilde Johnsdatter Guldvik^{1,2,3}

Abstract

This case report describes a 13 year-old African girl with a hard-healing scalp abscess treated with African honey after incision and drainage.

Streszczenie

Niniejszy opis przypadku ukazuje 13. letnią dziewczynkę z Afryki poddaną leczeniu miodem po wykonaniu nacięcia i odbarczenia zmiany.

Key words: scalp, abscess, alternative therapy, honey, Africa

Słowa kluczowe: ropień, skóra głowy, terapia alternatywna, miód, Afryka

Conflict of interest: none declared

Acknowledgements

To the staff of Haydom Lutheran Hospital in Tanzania.

Authors' affiliations:

¹ Haydom Lutheran Hospital in Tanzania

² School of Medicine in English, Jagiellonian University Medical College in Cracow, Poland

³ Parasitology Research Circle, Chair of Microbiology, Department of Bacteriology, Microbial Ecology and Parasitology, Jagiellonian University Medical College, Cracow, Poland

Corresponding author:

Mathilde Johnsdatter Guldvik
Hagavegen 23,
2608, Lillehammer
Norway
Phone: +47 971 33 176
e-mail : guldmat@hotmail.com

To cite this article: Grøndahl AK. Johnsdatter Guldvik M. African honey used on a nonhealing scalp wound. World J Med Images Videos Cases 2020; 6:e5-8.

Submitted for publication: 14 February 2020

Accepted for publication: 28 February 2020

Published on: 29 February 2020

ISSN: 2450-5773

© World Journal of Medical Images, Videos and Cases